ABSTRACT OF THE DISCLOSURE

5

Method and systems are provided for in vivo, non-invasive detection of blood analytes. A portion of the sterile matrix located beneath a nail is illuminated by passing radiation from an optical source through the nail into the sterile matrix. Scattered, refracted, or reflected radiation emitted within the sampled volume is collected and analyzed to identify and quantify one or more selected analytes.